The Local Hospital Had Successful Year

The Mary Chiles Hospital will make no drive for money during 1922. It has had a successful year and its deficit will be paid voluntarily by those interested in its welfare.

But Thanksgiving approaches and those in charge of the hospital will gratefully receive donations of the things so useful there—towels, table linens, preserves, flour, lard, apples, potatoes, eggs, foodstuffs of all kinds, coal, rugs and any of the many things that housekeepers will know about as so useful to have—or, if you prefer, you can give money, much or little, as you will.

But most of all, we need your interest and your activities. Whether you have a donation or not, visit the hospital on November 28 and 29 before Thanksgiving. Bring your donation if you have one. If you have not one, bring yourself, or, if you prefer, you can leave your donation at the Rest Room.

Christian Church Secures New Pastor

Rev. George Darsie, pastor of the church at Wilkinsburg Pa., has accepted a call to the local Christian church, and, it is expected, will assume his duties within the next few months.

Rev. Darsie, who is a cousin of Rev. Clyde Darsie, the church's former pastor, was recently in this city visiting his old schoolmate, E. R. Prewitt. While here he delivered two powerful sermons at the local church which, coupled with his oratory and strong personality, made quite an impression upon the audience.

The church feels very fortunate in being able to secure a man of the type and ability of Rev. Darsie, and it is sincerely hoped he may be able to assume his new duties in the shortest possible time.

ELEVATOR BURNS IN WINCHESTER BUILDING

Spontaneous combustion is thought to have caused the fire which burned the elevator in the five-story McEldowney building, in Winchester, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The entire building is fireproof, except for wooden runners in the shaft, and no current was on, as it is made in the building. All elevator doors were locked and firemen broke through the cellar door. Oil and grease on the wooden runners may have fed the blaze, it is thought. The 250 persons employed in the building will have to walk upstairs for several weeks, as all elevator machinery was burned.

Frank McKee Dies In New York City

Frank McKee was born in Mt. Sterling on the site where are now located the dwellings of W. P. Oldham and Steve Adamson. He was the son of Hon. Sam McKee and nephew of Judge H. Clay McKee, of this city. Sam McKee was a Civil War veteran, a captain in the Fourteenth Kentucky cavalry. He was taken prisoner here in Mt. Sterling, where he was in charge of the Federal forces, and surrendered the city to prevent its being burned by the Confederates. He was taken from here to Richmond, Va., and served eighteen months in Libby prison. While there the Confederates more than once threatened to have McKee shot, and on one occasion the news came that he would be shot on a certain day. When General Burbridge, who was in charge of the Federal forces, announced that if he were shot that he would take three of the most prominent Rebel sympathizers in this county and have them shot in retaliation. When this was announced Dr. J. A. Hannaf, L. D. Wilson and P. A. Howard thought they might come within the order and rode horseback to Richmond to intercede for McKee's life, and when they got to Richmond they were all put in prison, and for a time it looked as if they would be shot, too, as spies, but finally they were released, and the order to shoot McKee was rescinded.

Captain McKee was finally exchanged, returned to Mt. Sterling, and when he got here was met by a regiment of soldiers and under the booming of cannon, the glare of guns and bayonets and waving of flags was met on North Maysville street by thousands of people.

He was afterward elected to congress and served two terms. After this service he was appointed pension agent of Kentucky by President U. S. Grant, and removed to Louisville, where, after his term as pension agent, he practiced law up and until his death.

Frank McKee started out as a reporter on the Courier-Journal. He was afterward admitted to the bar, but is said of him that he thought it was too slow a way to get money, and went out with a circus. He was later with Jack Haverly, the great minstrel man, and while with him was more than once stranded in the New England states and was compelled to walk back to New York.

Jack was very solicitous with McKee, taking him to Europe with him, but the ghost of his long walk back to New York came before him, and he said to Jack: "I can't go; I am no Jesus and can't walk upon the water. How would I ever get back?"

While a reporter on the Courier-Journal he was sent to interview Governor Pinchback of Louisiana. The governor declined to be interviewed, but the next morning there appeared in the Courier-Journal two columns of an interview with him.

Mr. McKee was after leaving Jack Haverly associated with Hoyt & Thomas, the firm of Hoyt, Thomas & McKee, and while with them was the press agent and put on in all the big cities the famous plays, "The Texas Steer," "The Pavements of Paris," "The Tin Soldier" and other plays written by Hoyt. Hoyt was a playwright and wrote many plays and McKee put them on. When Hoyt passed away, it is said, he and Thomas also left their fortunes to McKee, who then and until his death was a resident of New York.

His first marriage was to Miss Isabelle Coe, who was the leading lady in Nat Goodwin's "Gold Mine" which had such a run through the country. To them was born a daughter, who died several years after her mother, and for a long time Frank was a widower. While a Republican in politics, he made his home at the Democratic Club on Fifth avenue. Two years ago he was married again to a widow in New York, and since then until shortly before his death, being in bad health, they spent most of their time in Europe.

He leaves a brother, Sam McKee, of New York, who is the sporting editor of the Morning Telegraph, and is one of the most prominent Elks in the country, a member of lodge No. 1, where they have one of the most magnificent homes in the country on Forty-third street.

He has another brother, Brainard McKee, in Louisville, who is the au-

It is stated that the attendance at this meeting will decide whether or not we shall continue to operate the balance of the year. This organization has done much toward the advancement of Mt. Sterling and Montgomery county and it is hoped the meeting Friday night may be a large and enthusiastic gathering.

AIRPLANES WITHOUT PILOTS

The pilotless army airplane, equipped with an automatic control device said to be more accurate and dependable than any human pilot, has been developed to a point where it has made successful flights of more than ninety miles, it was announced Tuesday by the army air service.

The announcement declared the results produced after a long series of experiments constituted post-war development of the many novel ideas of new engines of war.

It was added that the experiments had shown it to be possible to "shoot" bomb-laden planes, without pilots, at targets on or off the ground with astounding accuracy.

Air service officials characterized the invention "as the dream of engineers and inventors the world over ever since the solution of heavier than air flight, which has been positively accomplished in this country."

GIANT DAM PROPOSED FOR LICKING RIVER

Erection of a dam on the Licking river near Parks Ferry in Nicholas county at an approximate cost of $7,000,000 is under consideration by an Indianapolis syndicate. The object of the dam would be to furnish light, heat and power for Central Kentucky.

A similar project will be started on the Cumberland river next year by the same syndicate, according to T. A. Tinscher, representative of the company, who has been in Carlisle this week to interview W. F. Clark, who owns land near Parks Ferry on Licking river, in regard to his holdings. His plan calls for the damming of the river about a mile above Parks Ferry, on the property of E. T. Flora and W. F. Clark, merchants of Carlisle.

Present plans of the company are for a dam 125 feet high and 150 feet wide at the base, which will provide a storage pool covering hundreds of miles of bottom land, for fifty or seventy-five miles up the river. Tinscher, who has been considering a similar proposition at Falmouth, says this would be an ideal location for a dam of this character, as it is the nearest river point to the L. & N. railroad.

Ladies Will Succor Sick Ex-Service Men

The War Mothers and the American Legion Auxiliary have undertaken to assist the legion and the Red Cross to care for the increasing numbers of sick and disabled soldiers in the community until government aid can be secured.

The proceeds from the forget-me-not sale will be used to help do the work, while efforts to secure additional funds will be made.

All who are eligible to membership in the War Mothers and the Auxiliary are requested to affiliate with either or both organizations and help do this work which has been carried on by a small number of women since the close of the war.

No individual solicitation for membership will be made. Those who are interested in the ex-service men and their needs can secure information by attending the joint official monthly meeting of the two organizations which is held the last Wednesday in each month at 3 p. m. at the History Club room.

Colonel Sprague, national chairman of the American Legion rehabilitation committee, says, "Only by the wide persistent and unselfish co-operation of many agencies can the veterans of the world war be rehabilitated properly." This work is not the hobby, fad or fancy of any individual or organization, but a serious situation confronting the whole nation, the facts being vouched for by such reputable organizations as the American Legion, the Red Cross, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, etc.

America Must Lead Way, Says Wilson

Woodrow Wilson told a host of friends and admirers who made an Armistice Day visit to his home in Washington on Saturday that world peace could be brought about only by "active co-operation for justice," and "not by amiable phrases." America always has stood for justice, he declared, adding that the "Puny persons" now standing in the way would find presently that "their weakness is no match for the strength of a moving Providence."

The former president spoke standing on the portico of his S. street residence and without manuscript or notes. His remarks consumed about five minutes. They were the first he had made on public questions since he was stricken on his League of Nations tour of the west three years ago. This was his third public appearance since he left the White House March 4, 1921.

The appearance of Mr. Wilson, who was assisted to the portico by a servant, was the signal for prolonged cheers from the crowd that packed the street and overflowed on nearby lawns and a vacant field. The war-time president responded with a smile and the raising of his conventional silk hat.

Mrs. Wilson did not accompany him but as she appeared to assist him back indoors at the conclusion of his address she, too, received an ovation.

Mr. Wilson's address was in response to one delivered to him by Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, who declared that the principles enunciated by Mr. Wilson during the war would prevail and that on last Tuesday it had been demonstrated that "the people of America are escaping from materialism and selfishness and are preparing again to recognize their solemn and inexorable duty toward their fellow nations in Europe."

This reference to the elections brought a smile and a low cry of "hear, hear," from the chief executive. In his remarks Mr. Wilson spoke clearly and distinctly and with much of his old time rapidity. Necessarily, however, there was lacking the once characteristic vigor of delivery, and his voice carried only slightly beyond the inner edges of the big crowd. The text of his remarks follows:

"I am very much moved by this wonderful exhibition of your friendship and approval, and I have been reflecting today that Armistice Day has particular significance for the United States because the United States has remained contented with the armistice and has not moved forward to peace."

"It is a very serious reflection that the United States the great originative nation should remain contented with a negation. Armistice is a negation; it is a standstill of arms; it is a cessation of fighting, and we are so bent on a cessation of fighting that we are even throwing our arms away."

"It is a singular circumstance, that which Mr. Morgenthau has in part adverted, that while we prescribed the conditions of the armistice we did not concur in the establishment of permanent peace. That, of course, was brought about by a group in the United States senate who preferred personal, partisan motive to the honor of their country and the peace of the world."

"They do not represent the United States, because the United States is moving forward and they are slipping backward. Where their slipping will end, God only will determine."

"And I have also been reflecting upon the radical difference between armistice and peace. Armistice, as I have said, is a mere negation; it is the refraining from force. But peace is a very positive and constructive thing as the world stands nowadays, because it must be brought about by the systematic maintenance of common understanding and by cultivation—not by amiable phrases, but the active co-operation for justice, and justice is a greater thing than any kind of expediency."

"America has always stood for justice and always will stand for it. Puny persons who are now standing in the way will presently find that their weakness is no match for strength of a moving Providence. If you will pardon an invalid for putting on his hat, I will promise not to talk through it."

"I think then we may renew today our faith in the future though we are celebrating the past. The future is in our hands, and if we are not equal to it, the shame will be ours and none others. I thank you from a very full heart, my friends, for this demonstration of kindness by you and bid you and the nation Goodspeed."

The singing of southern melodies by a chorus opened the program and Mr. Wilson then appeared. He was presented with baskets of flowers from Virginia, his native state; New Jersey, his home state, and the District of Columbia. The former president shook hands with each of the little flower girls and thanked them.

After the program of exercises had been concluded there appeared to be no disposition on the part of the big crowd to break up. Soon Mr. and Mrs. Wilson appeared at an upstairs window and were cheered time and again. There was a final cheer for the League of Nations.

The former president as he looked down into the faces before him occasionally recognized close friends in the throng. He waved to President Edwin A. Alderman, of the University of Virginia, and E. T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture, and one or two others.

GET HIGH PROTECTION, THEN SLASH WAGES

Workers in practically every American plant manufacturing sanitary pottery, were recently ordered on strike as a protest against the reduction of 20 per cent made in their wages by their employers most of whom are members of an organization that urged higher rates of duty on their products in order to "protect" the industry.

Already about 50,000 employees of various pottery plants in Trenton, N. J., and adjacent towns have quit work in response to the strike order from the executives of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. It is expected that nearly all of the 10,000 men in Trenton and its environs will go on strike. The brotherhood has many thousands of members throughout the country.

The new Fordney-McCumber profiteers' tariff law raised the duties on this class of pottery from 33 1-3 to 60 per cent, and the prices now asked of consumers have already begun to reflect these increases. Now within a few weeks after the manufacture of sanitary pottery obtained the "protection" they demanded of the Republic can congress they have cut the wages of their employees and advanced the prices of their wares.

It is believed that many other beneficiaries of the exorbitant rates of the Fordney-McCumber act will reduce wages now that the elections have been held.

Probably the prettiest women in the world today are the kitchen queens in the magazine ads.

How ephemeral is capital is exhibited by the clarity with which Russia dispersed hers in about five years.

COUNTRY PRESS A BIG FACTOR

A statement issued by the Democratic national committee contains this tribute to the country press:

"In assessing credit for the great Democratic victory of Tuesday, November 7, it is but justice to say that there was no more important factor than the Democratic and independent country press, at the same time making due acknowledgment of the splendid public and political service rendered by the daily press, Democratic, independent and many leading Republican papers which were in revolt against the profiteers' tariff and Newberryism.

"Since the Republican administration came into power the Democratic and independent country press have given to their readers the main facts concerning congress and the administration, so interpreted that the readers obtained a meaning of the news as well as the news itself. In the most remote sections of the country the readers of the country papers have been kept constantly informed of the issues in the campaign. That these issues were understood and intelligently acted upon is shown by the vote in rural sections of the country.

"In addition to giving their readers the high-lights of the national news, the country press has editorially discussed the issues of the campaign in a most convincing and effective manner. They have rendered not only a service to the Democratic party, but to the public.

"It may well be doubted if any other form of publication is so thoroughly read and so well digested as the country newspapers and certainly no other publications have more sincerely at heart the welfare of their respective communities. As a rule their characteristics are a rugged honesty, high courage, clear and plain-speaking, and, with few exceptions, they accurately and fairly reflect public sentiment within the radius of their circulation. The future of America will always be secure as long as the country press remains true to its record and its traditions."

Burley Pool Upheld In Garrett Watts Case

Presiding Judge James C. Dedman, of Cynthiana, in the Bourbon circuit court Tuesday held valid the contract signed by Garrett Watts, of Lexington, pledging his tobacco to the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association and held that the contract is binding on the defendant as a member of the association.

The judge overruled the demurrer of Mr. Watts to the petition of the burley association and awarded the pool judgment for $325 and its cost.

The amount of the judgment rendered by the court is based on a question as to the amount of tobacco which was owned and grown by Mr. Watts in 1921. The judgment entered in the case is as follows:

"Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, plaintiff, vs. judgment No. 11822, Garrett Watts, defendant.

"Now comes the defendant, Garrett Watts, and files his demurrer to the petition of the plaintiff herein, which is noted of record; and said demurrer being heard, and the court advised, it is now adjudged that the contract sued on herein, which is one of a number of identical contracts entered into by the plaintiff with different persons, is binding on the defendant as a member of said association; and it is further ordered that the demurrer of the defendant to the plaintiff's petition be, and the same is hereby overruled. Now comes the defendant and files his answer herein which is noted of record and there being a question as to the amount of tobacco which is owned and grown by the defendant in the year 1921, the law and the facts are submitted to the court; and it is now adjudged that the plaintiff, Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, recover of the defendant, Watts, the sum of $325, and its costs herein."

The Watts case is the first of a number of prosecutions to be instigated by the association against members who are alleged to have violated

SHIP SOLD BY LASKER FOR $1,600 BURNS

Developments following the partial destruction of a wooden ship sold by the United States shipping board to a private corporation for about $1,600 have furnished striking comment on the value of the vessels of the government fleet which the Harding administration is trying to sell for about ten per cent of its original cost.

It is announced in a new dispatch from Alexandria, Va., that the Western Marine & Salvage Company, which has been buying ships from the shipping board, is employing 100 men in the work of dismantling these vessels and is to engage about 200 more.

The hull of the Alanthus, the ship which was damaged by fire on October 24, is being pumped dry, after burning to the water's edge and her machinery is to be salvaged. The dispatch to the Washington Post, semi-official organ of the Harding administration and advocate of the president's ship bonus bill under which all the government fleet would be sold to private interests, says:

"It is believed that the machinery, which constitutes the most valuable part of the salvage, is practically uninjured by either the fire or the flooding which followed."

When the ship burned the Washington Times published a dispatch from Alexandria giving the information that "according to the officials of Alexandria, it is estimated that the damage (to the Alanthus) was $25,000."

It is difficult to understand how a ship that was sold for $1,600 could suffer damage of $25,000 unless the price paid by the purchasers was very much less than the true value. But the fact remains that a big corporation finds advantage in hiring 100 men to dismantle the Alanthus after the hull has been ruined.

Never try to guess a man's name from the initials on the handle of an umbrella he is carrying.

HULL PREDICTED THE VICTORY

The great Democratic victory of November 7, accurately forecasted by Chairman Cordell Hull, of the Democratic national committee, marks the beginning of the return of the people to the Democratic party and the restoration of that party to complete power in 1924. It is more than a protest against Republican incompetency and failure. It is a repudiation of the major policies which the present reactionary Republican congress and administration—the most reactionary in history—have advocated and foisted upon the people. It is a repudiation of tariff-robbing, of tax-shifting and tax-juggling, of Newberryism, Daughertyism and Laskerism, of reckless appropriation and extravagant expenditure, of the alliance between the reactionary leaders of the Republican party and special privilege and of the re-thronement of the spoils system in government departments.

In many of its features the election was a personal rebuke to President Harding himself. The Republican candidate for governor of Ohio, who is supposed to have won his nomination by reason of being an administration favorite, was defeated; Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, the president's fellow-vacationer and his boon companion, was emphatically and decisively squelched; Newberry, who obtained a certificate of character from President Harding prior to the trial of the Newberry case by the senate, was repudiated wherever there were Democratic majorities; Lodge, the administration's spokesman in the senate, has been humiliated to a degree which in some respects is worse than his defeat would have been, and a recount of the votes in Massachusetts may add to his humiliation. There were minor casualties in the presidential coterie.

President Harding had definitely committed himself to the Republican policies and candidates that were on trial. He spoke for them by the lips of his cabinet officers. He gave every sign that he regarded the result as either approval or disapproval of the Republican administration's acts and omissions. The supreme court of the electorate has given its decision. Mr. Harding and the Republican congress stand condemned for the future no less than for the past.

One thing lacking in the election was the failure to give the Democrats a substantial majority in the house. A small Republican majority in the house however, is equivalent to a Democratic victory. The balance of power will be held by progressives and radicals who are as much opposed to Republican reactionism as the Democrats.

Republican reactionism has been checked but not destroyed. The work so suspiciously begun at the election will be completed in 1924.

FOR GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY

Who will the Democrats of Kentucky name as their candidate for governor? is a question of the most serious moment. Serious because the governor of Kentucky will be confronted by propositions that only financiers of ability can solve. The great common people feel that they are being taxed for the maintenance of unnecessary offices and commissions; that many positions could properly be cared for by forces from the heads of departments without adding one dollar more to the salary fund. Men filling positions in the departments would not be long idle as they are now, for they would have more to do. This would be one of the lesser matters to be handled. The educational department is a matter to be handled so that the greatest good may be given to pupils. Then there is the road question, a matter that demands accuracy of thought. These are but a few of the objects that are being neglected and should be handled now. The Democrats have the needed material within their ranks and of this material the party should offer only its most competent men to deal with these difficult tasks. Who shall it be? is the real question. Congressman Barkley, of the First district, is being measured up for the place, and we believe he is one of the many who would prove himself equal to the handling of difficult conditions. There are others who have not as yet entered the political arena, and we want to say that only men of knowledge, pluck and grit should be considered.

THE GAS QUESTION

This matter can be easily adjusted at this time so that Mt. Sterling and other cities along the pipe line of the Central Kentucky Natural Gas Company can have an abundance of gas and to spare. With extreme cold weather the draft on the present storage seems inadequate and now with about 7,000,000 cubic feet within a few miles of the pipe line that leads here it would, in our judgment, be wise to connect with this natural storage. Such a connection would place us more prominently on the business map. We understand Louisville is seeking to secure the connection and, if once in their hands, we could beg for it without hope of a favorable answer.

WE LEAD

Without boastful spirit we are constrained to say The Advocate leads its field in every classification of circulation. First in city circulation, first in suburban circulation, first in county circulation, carrying a total circulation of more than double its nearest contemporary. Use The Advocate for results.

INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE

There are circulars on the rounds talking about a candidate for governor that could control the independent vote of Kentucky. We would suggest the Hon. Andrew Gump as that independent candidate.

thor of "Shakespeare in Imerick," and a sister, Mrs. Frank Greer, Louisville.

Frank McKee was a generous, whole-souled fellow and often in a single night would spend a week's salary with theatrical friends in New York. At his request his remains were cremated in New York and brought to Louisville and placed in beautiful Cave Hill cemetery, where lie the remains of his father and mother, one brother and sister. His brother, Sam McKee, accompanied the body to Louisville, and before returning to New York will make a short visit to his only uncle, Judge H. Clay McKee, in this city.

Frank McKee's career was short, but he lived a long time while he did live. Peace to his ashes.

PLEDGES ARE BINDING

The pledges signed by members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association are binding. Those who break their agreement are liable for damages. This decision of Judge James C. Dedman was expected, but as it affects the validity of 77,000 contracts, it is of widespread interest and importance.

As it affects another phase of Kentucky's welfare, the decision is even more important. The farmers who have signed, in good faith, a promise not to sell their tobacco except through the association have relied solely on the law for protection of their interests. The law now stands as their protector. The association is a lawful organization; it looks to the law, and acts through it.

Looking back on attempts at "pooling" recalls the days of bad faith, of selfishness, of law-breaking and armed reprisals. The law, now supporting co-operation, was ignored and trampled. The loss was incalculable. It meant discouragement to tobacco growers and it advertised Kentucky to its disadvantage.

As said, the decision was expected. The co-operative organization is a legally formed corporation. It comes into court with clean hands. It has acted in good faith. Its signers have pledged their crops voluntarily and in consideration of better prices for products. The contract-breaker is at a distinct disadvantage. He has violated a legal contract and he can find no valid excuse.

An adverse decision in the Watts case would have entailed severe loss in time and labor. The co-operative movement could not be killed, but it would have been severely handicapped. New contracts would have been called for and those who have broken pledges might have escaped the just penalties incurred. But co-operation is here to stay. The farmers who have enjoyed the benefits derived from co-operative marketing would not consent to return to the unbusiness-like and unprofitable methods of competitive selling.

The Bingham Act, passed by the general assembly, is valid. It protects the farmers in their co-operative efforts to be protected in disposing of their tobacco at a fair price. The law, in its majesty, stands with the 77,000 who intend to see that their rights are lawfully upheld.—Louisville Times.

He gave as Bible school aims: Every church having a Bible school; standard schools; training institutes; woman's missionary work.

OLD CIRCUS CLOWN, 71, LIVES IN LIVINGSTON

James Christopher Cunningham, who lives at Vicksburg, Ky., up the Cumberland river from Smithland, is quite an interesting character. He is nearly 71 years old, but moves about as sprightly as a man much younger. He does much manual labor in garden time and paints houses during the warmer months. He can hold the attention of anyone in relating his experiences of his younger days.

Uncle Jimmy traveled with Hamlin Wizard Oil Company for some time as a black-face comedian. Many people will remember when the Wizard Oil people drove through this part of the country selling Wizard Oil and giving free performances on the large and beautiful wagon. Four big gray horses were used. He said it was about thirty-five years ago when he started from Bridgeport, Conn., going direct to New Orleans and through Texas with this company. They visited many of the west Kentucky towns.

Later Uncle Jimmy was a clown in a circus and among the shows where he did funny acts were P. T. Barnum, John Robinson, John O'Brien Dan Rice and John Murray. The latter show was not known in this section as it showed only in the east. He started out with Dan Rice's famous show at Columbus, Ohio.

At the age of 18 years, Uncle Jimmy joined the Barnum circus in Philadelphia, which was in 1876, during the centennial. He came to Livingston county with a small show which soon "busted" and was unable to pay any of the employees. He says he does not remember the name as the show was run by crooks and changed name at most every town it visited. It had a bear and a few dogs and an Italian brass band. One day when this show was preparing to give an exhibition at Vicksburg Uncle Jimmy was beating the bass drum, when the leader instructed him to "give it hell." He did so, by taking his pocket knife and ripping the head of the drum wide open. The show company was about ready to disband, he said, and this act finished it. Mr. Cunningham has been in this county about thirty-three years and after the show quit he says he decided to stay here as he liked the town so well. He worked on David Adams' farm for $7 a month and his wife did the cooking. It might be stated right here that Mrs. Cunningham died a few months ago, having lost her eyesight a number of years ago.

Uncle Jimmy was injured while with Sells Bros. circus during a performance at New Albany, Ind. He was a bareback rider and fell from a horse on an iron stake, inflicting an injury so serious that he was sent to a hospital at Louisville. The show people made up about $500 and turned over to Uncle Jimmy and the show went on its way, leaving the injured man to his fate. Several months later he had sufficiently recovered to try the circus route again and joined the same company at Mobile, Ala., remaining with them until reaching New Orleans. He was compelled to give up the big shows and later joined the smaller ones.

Uncle Jimmy is what might be called a man without a country. He was born on the ocean, on an old sailing vessel which took fourteen weeks to come from Liverpool to New York. There were no steamships in those days, he said. He said his father came from Ireland and his mother from England. His father was an exile from the English army, coming to this country, and later has wife followed, and while en route the son was born.

Uncle Jimmy says he traveled all over this country until thirty-two years ago, when he gave up the road. He was married in Louisville forty years ago. One son was born, but died at the age of six years.

Uncle Jimmy declares that the biggest hit of his life was when he sang the "Twin Orphans" in the Capital hotel at Little Rock, Ark., many years ago.—Livingston Enterprise.

DAIRY PROFITS MAY DROP IF COW'S NEEDS SLIGHTED

The time of the year is about here when the profits from Kentucky farm dairy herds begin to drop unless the cows are given good feed and kept in comfortable barns, according to J. J. Hooper, head of the dairy department of the College of Agriculture. Although Kentucky winters are not as long or as severe as those of the famous dairy sections of the north, the same careful methods that help the northern dairymen and farmers get bigger profits from their dairy cows can be used to advantage by farmers in this state.

"From now until next spring, cows should have a pound of mixed feed for every three and one-half pounds of milk that they give, and in addition should be fed 10 pounds of clover, alfalfa or cowpea hay and 30 pounds of silage daily. A good grain mixture may be made of four pounds of corn meal, two pounds of bran or shipstuf and two pounds of cottonseed meal. If silage cannot be fed, some succulent feed, like beet pulp, should be used unless the cows can get plenty of green grass.

"Dairy cows cannot be given good care at this time of the year unless they are kept in a barn all night and part of the day. This being the case, comfort and healthful surroundings for the cow are of first importance. Plenty of light, good ventilation and lots of clean bedding are the big items in making the cow comfortable. There should be four square feet of window glass for each stall or stallion, while the windows should be well distributed so that each stable gets plenty of light. In order to get enough air, each cow requires at least 500 cubic feet of space. The air in the stable must be changed frequently if it is to stay fresh at all times. This should be done without causing drafts of cold air on the cows or without unduly lowering the temperature in the stable. Fresh air may be admitted through windows hinged at the bottom and tipping inward.

"Bedding the cows freely twice a day with clean straw helps to keep them clean and comfortable. Just before milking is a good time to clean up and add fresh straw."

BARRED ROCK PULLET SETS NEW MARK ON STATION FARM

All previous records for the number of eggs laid in a year by individual hens in the experiment station flocks of the College of Agriculture have been broken by a Barred Rock pullet that has just completed her first year of laying with a total of 263 eggs to her credit, according to an announcement of J. Holmes Martin, in charge of the college poultry work. This is three more eggs than were laid by a White Leghorn hen that has held the farm record since 1919. The most striking thing about the new record as seen by poultrymen is that good breeding, the right kind of feed and proper care made it possible for a hen to lay 200 eggs more in a year than the average hen on Kentucky farms lays. The new holder of the farm record is the result of only three years' work on the part of the station poultrymen to get Barred Plymouth Rocks that will lay a large number of eggs in a year.

The new record holder started laying November 3, 1921, and from that time until her first year was completed laid consistently every month. Now that her first year of laying has been finished, the amount of protein that has been fed her in the past is being cut down so that she will go into a molt and come back into laying in time to produce eggs for the spring hatching season. She laid 25 eggs on November, 27 in December, 21 in January, 22 in February, 27 in March, 21 in April, 25 in May, 18 in June, 20 in July, 20 in August, 22 in September, 14 in October and one during the first two days of November. The largest number of eggs which she laid on successive days was 22, this having been done between May 18 and June 8.

Aside from the fact that she is a bird of good size and has desirable Barred Plymouth Rock type and color, the new holder of the farm record is an example of what breeding, good feed and the right kind of care will do in raising the number of eggs that chickens lay. Mr. Martin says. Her mother was a hen that laid only 161 eggs in her best year, but laid for 11 months, thus showing that she had the power to continue laying over a long period of time. In addition she was a hen that had another desirable characteristic in that she layed until late in the fall before going into a molt.

JEFFERSON COUNTY USING COVERS SROPS TO SAVE SOIL

Hundreds of Jefferson county farmers have taken steps to protect their fields from soil washing and the leaching away of plant food during the coming winter by seeding them to cover crops, according to County Agent F. E. Merriam. Thirty farmers of the county are co-operating with the extension division of the College of Agriculture at Lexington and Mr. Merriam in carrying on demonstrations on their farms to show how these crops keep soils from washing and save hundreds of dollars' worth of plant food that leaches away if the fields are left bare.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

WHO WAS KASPAR HAUSER?

WHEN the police of Nuremberg first discovered this youth, apparently about eighteen years of age, leaning up against a wall in one of the public squares with his hands over his eyes to protect them from the glare of the sun, they at first thought that he was some idiot who had escaped from a sanitarium. But investigation soon developed that there was a case as unique as that of the man in the iron mask, and resembling it in a number of ways.

Not only were the boy's eyes weak, but his muscles were as flabby as those of an infant and the soles of his feet were convex, like those of a baby that has never learned to walk. He had to be carried bodily to police headquarters and even there, the sight of the commonest objects appeared to terrify him, while the slightest of sounds caused him to cover his ears and, wince as if his ear-drums were accustomed only to total silence. On the other hand, his face indicated that he was of good parentage, and the clothing which he wore was fashioned of the softest, finest materials.

In an effort to discover something about his identity, one of the police officials offered him a pencil which, much to the surprise of those present, he seized and wrote the two words "Kaspar Hauser," which, as it afterwards developed, was the only clue he could give to his past.

Prof. G. F. Daumer of the University of Nuremberg, hearing about the strange case, took the young man to his home—amazed not only by the fact that he could neither talk nor walk, but that he would eat nothing but bread and water. The professor, however, started to educate him at once and in a surprisingly short time the youth had progressed sufficiently to give a graphic story of his experiences.

For as long as he could remember he had been confined to a dark cell, into which the sun had never penetrated. He had been visited once a day by a man who washed and dressed him and fed him a ration of bread and water. It was this man who had taught him to write the words "Kaspar Hauser," which Professor Daumer believed to be a false name given to him in order to mislead the authorities and to conceal his real identity. Finally, he declared, he had been blindfolded and led into the street where the police had found him.

The young man's story naturally created a vast amount of comment in all sections of Europe and the Daumer house became the center of attraction for the curious, many of whom maintained that they might be able to identify Hauser, but none of whom were able to produce the proof of their contention.

The next development in the mysterious chain of circumstances surrounding the youth, came about five months after Hauser's discovery by the police, when he staggered into Professor Daumer's library, half-blind by the blood which dripped from an open gash in his forehead. It was some time before he recovered consciousness sufficiently to state that a masked man had struck at him with a saber, that he had dodged the blow and that his assailant had fled before he could give the alarm. The inference which the police drew from the attack was that the same person who had imprisoned the boy was now striving to kill him, lest he divulge the secret of his birth.

Shortly afterward, the case came to the attention of the wealthy Lord Stanhope, who, convinced that Hauser was of aristocratic and perhaps of royal parentage, adopted him and sent him under guard to Anspach, where he was educated. Some three years later, Lord Stanhope arrived in Anspach with the intention of taking his protégé back to England with him. On the morning of the day that they were to leave Hauser received a note, telling him to come to a certain place where he would learn the secret of his birth. Less than an hour later the English nobleman heard moans from outside his apartment and, opening the door, was just in time to catch Hauser as he fell, blood welling from a knife-wound in his side. He had barely gasped the words, "Uzen monument—palace grounds" when he fell dead.

Lord Stanhope hurried to the Uzen monument and found there a slip of paper bearing, in the young man's handwriting, the cryptic message: "Kaspar Hauser—murdered at the age of twenty-one. Know by this that I come from the Bavarian frontier on the river. The initials of my name are M. L. B."

And not even the offer of a reward of 5,000 florins by Lord Stanhope nor the investigations of countless amateur and professional detectives could ever throw the slightest light upon the birth or death of this human enigma.

His Complaint.

"As the song has it, we are only poor weak mortals, after all." "Admitted," said Mr. Grumpson. "What I object to is the large number of persons with no other visible means of support who draw fat salaries for telling us how weak we are."

Ever Thus.

FALL FRUIT TREE SETTING UNDER WAY OVER KENTUCKY

The fall planting of fruit trees is on in full swing in almost every part of the state, according to W. W. Magill, orchard extension specialist of the College of Agriculture. Nurseries are making numerous shipments of young trees while scores of farmers are making plans for their future orchards. The care that is given the young tree from the time they arrive at the railroad station until they are planted plays a large part in determining whether or not they live, Mr. Magill says.

Trees from the nursery should be heeled in at some spot convenient to the orchard site just as soon as possible after they arrive. This is done by digging a trench deep enough to fully cover the roots and sloping considerably more on one side than it does on the other. The trees are then separated and their roots placed close together along the trench with the trunks on the sloping side. The soil is then carefully worked in around the roots and tramped down solid.

A good way to keep the tree roots from drying out while the planting is being done is to put them in a barrel or tub half full of a thick mud made by mixing water and clay soil. The barrel or tub and the trees can be moved easily from place to place if they are placed on a sled or wagon. Most commercial growers of the state prefer to plant their trees in the fall, since the soil is more tillable at this time and becomes firmly settled around the roots of the young trees before they start growing in the spring. However, if bad weather stops the planting before the trees are all set those that are left can be heeled in and kept over for spring planting. Damage from rabbits to the newly set trees can be stopped by putting poultry netting two feet high around them.

Apple trees are best planted about 35 by 35 feet and peach trees about 24 by 24 feet apart. When the holes for the trees are being dug, the top and subsoil should be kept separate so that the richer top soil can be placed around the roots of the trees. It is not a good practice to mix straw, manure or leaves with the dirt as the holes are being filled as these tend to stop the rise of water through the soil and may cause the tree to die because of lack of moisture. Care should be taken to pack the soil well around the roots.

FERTILITY SOILS LEAF CROP

Close to $6,000,000 worth of soil fertility will be taken away from Kentucky farms when the state's estimated 1922 crop of 500,000,000 pounds of tobacco is marketed, according to R. E. Stephenson, soils specialist of the College of Agriculture. This is a heavy drain on the fertility of the state's farms that takes away plant food worth more than twice the amount that is returned in commercial fertilizers. Stalks that are produced along with the leaf crop make good fertilizer and if they are used carefully will help considerably toward checking the annual drain on soils that grow tobacco, Mr. Stephenson says.

A total of 150,000,000 pounds of tobacco stalks, or 75,000 tons, are produced along with a crop of 500,000,000 pounds of leaf. Figured at the cost of commercial fertilizers, the value of the nitrogen, potash and phosphorus taken from the soil by a ton of stalks alone is worth $18. At this rate, the 75,000 tons of stalks produced in the state this year contain fertilizer worth $1,350,000. This makes the value of the stalks greater than the commercial fertilizers used on the tobacco crop.

Tobacco is especially rich in nitrogen and potash and therefore makes a good supplement for phosphate fertilizers. A ton of the stalks contains about as much nitrogen and potash as eight tons of stable manure. They should therefore be spread over as large an area as possible when being used on the farm. The stalks also are excellent for top dressing young grass or small grain in the spring.

Both the nitrogen and the potash in tobacco is quite soluble and leaches away easily. When the stalks are left in piles exposed to the weather there is, therefore, a considerable waste of fertilizer. The fact that they contain about $18 worth of plant food to the ton makes it important that they be taken care of so that their value will not be destroyed during the winter. Storing the stalks in a shed until spread on the field is the best means of making sure that none of the fertility which they contain will be wasted.

IF IT FITS—

It is strange how deaf a man can be when he is being told things for "his own good."

It will soon be time to take the old New Year's resolutions out of the moth balls and give them their annual airing.

Probably no one learns to regret another man's death any more than the poor fish who has married his widow.

Of course, the poor prudes may have been given an awful scare, but we owe the knickerbocker craze did not become popular enough to worry the manufacturers of short skirts.

Of course it takes money too, but just the same it takes more sense than dollars to make a happy married life.

A pedestrian has to be pretty acclimated to dodge motor cars, but at that he has a cinch compared to the poor candidate who has to dodge the political issues.

In Holland and Belgium it is considered unlucky to kill a stork. We imagine the birth control advocates would get an even warmer reception there than "Pussyfoot" Johnson did in England.

The people who think a thing is wrong just because they do not want to do it are no worse, however, than the birds who think a thing is right because they want to do it.

As we get it, the uplift of women is being accomplished by bringing the skirts down to the ground.

Truth may be disagreeable, as the old saw says, but it can't be anything like as disagreeable as some of the untruth that is broadcasted.

If the girls who bobbed their hair desire to see how they look, just let them get their lamps on one of these giant chrysantheums on exhibition.

Big words were invented to enable fools to advertise how little they know; wise men use the little words to express their big ideas.

Fast friends are the best thing a man can have—and yet they are the worst.—Sam Hill in Cincinnati Enquirer.

After you have roamed around the world for a while you will discover that the people who have least to complain about do most of the kicking and grumbling.
